Show Me Renewal

- Now: Throughout the UM System, a number of administrators, faculty, staff and graduate students will begin to return to work on campus in a first wave that is focused on critical research
- Coming weeks to months: The number of administrators, faculty, staff and graduate students carrying out their duties on campus will steadily grow in preparation for in-person operations to resume in Fall 2020, unless the guidelines from public health officials require us to change course.

Show Me Renewal

Guiding Principles

Planning Process

Phases of Returning to Campus

Monitoring and Reassessments

- Our processes and decisions will support mission for student success, research and engagement
- Health & safety of our students, staff, faculty and visitors are paramount
- Recommendations from the CDC, state and local public departments will guide our processes and decisions (thus, specific plans for campuses may vary)
- Our plans will evolve to meet the changing circumstances

Systemwide Approach

- We will observe all health & safety measures, including:
  - Six-foot social distancing from others
  - Wear a cloth mask or other face covering if unable to maintain six-foot social distancing requirement
  - Limit in-person meetings and group gatherings to a size that complies with federal, state or local public health guidelines and social distancing
  - Wash hands often, use hand sanitizer, avoid touching eyes, nose and mouth, cover coughs and sneezes, disinfect surfaces
  - Measure own temperature, notify supervisor if higher than 100.4F
  - Notify supervisor and stay home if experiencing COVID-19 symptoms

Systemwide Approach

- Employees may be required to observe additional precautionary measures when job duties make social distancing difficult
  - May be screened for symptoms of COVID-19
  - May be required to wear PPE;
- Employees with higher risk for severe illness from COVID-19 should notify their supervisors and HR office to request reasonable accommodations

Scenarios for Fall Opening

Scenario #1 – None-to-minimal community transmission or impact of Covid-19

- In-person teaching, learning and engagement
- Remote learning options for those who can't be on campus (health or travel restrictions)
- On campus research

Scenario #2 – Minimal-to-moderate community transmission or impact of Covid-19

- Hybrid of in-person and remote teaching, learning and engagement
- On campus research with health and safety precautions

Scenario #3 – Substantial community transmission or impact of Covid-19.

- Primarily remote teaching, learning and engagement.
- Special exceptions for cases that require in-person teaching, learning and engagement (clinical, professional, licensure, etc)
- Limited on-campus research with health and safety precautions

Scenario #4 – Begin term under scenario 1 but may transition to scenario 2 or 3

Scenario #5 – Begin term under scenarios 1 or 2 but may transition to to scenario 3

There are other scenarios as well

Course Preparation for Fall 2020

- All Fall 2020 courses must have an on-line, remote version
  - Even with normal operation, some students may not be able to attend in-person
- On-line and remote versions of courses must be rich in content and be of the highest quality
- Faculty, staff and teaching assistants assigned to teach in the fall must begin the preparation of developing on-line, remote versions of their courses now
- High-quality on-line, remote courses take at least 10 weeks to develop
- Resources are available through UM eLearning office to assist in the development
- Department chairs will be asked to confirm compliance (trust and verify)
